The following information was created by the National Council of State Directors of Adult Education. The link will take you to their Web site and to the side-by-side comparison of current Workforce Investment Act legislation, the House and Senate versions of the new bill and the positions taken by the State Directors:

At this point it does not seem likely that reauthorization of WIA will take place during this Congressional session but we have not given up hope that something will emerge as part of a lame duck session after the November election. If this Congress does not approve a new bill the process must start all over again in January 2007. However the work that has been done in the House, Senate and by leaders in the adult education and literacy field should serve as a solid base for the new legislation.

Thank you for all that you do to advocate for adult literacy in your community.
